Dayal, P. 1996: A Textbook of Geomorphology, Shukla Book Depot, Patna. Project 726 Project 726 was a comparative study of federal criminal and state criminal laws in several US states. The project was a special resource of the Criminal Law Division of the US Department of Justice. The project sought to analyze the federal criminal and state criminal laws of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Vermont as well as the planned laws of Florida and Arizona. The project brought together federal and state law enforcement personnel, judges, legislators and prosecutors to discuss the problems and approaches to federal and state criminal law. Project 726 also worked to draft proposed changes to the federal criminal code, as well as state criminal codes. The project was chaired by former Attorney General of the United States Ramsey Clark. The subcommittee of the project, Committee 14, created the Uniform Crime Report (UCR), which provided annual reports of crime in the United States. Committee 14 Each of the five subcommittee members were: State court prosecutor: O. John Rogge, M.D. Assistant U.S. Attorney: Ira M. Lampton Federal Bureau of Investigation Director: H. G. Nicholas Jr. Louisiana District Attorney's Office: L. L. Sutter Michigan Department of Public Safety: T. T. Thompson References

In most cases, the temperature of the lead silicide and the emitter is enhanced while the silicon substrate is lowered. As stated before, the TAT can be reduced by using a single-base emitter instead of a dual-base emitter. This is easily done by shortening the base length of the base branch transistor, or the base length of the base-base branch transistor, or by shortening the base
